BRITORN his Honor Mr. Justice CHERKE.

James Mac Neill was indicted for having stolen a mare, the property of one Frederick Myers.

The Solicitor-General conducted the case for the Crewn. Mr. G. C. Davis, instructed by Mr. R. B. Smith, appeared for the defence. It was shown in evidence for the presecution that, on the 21st November, 1860, an acrosment had been made in writing, and signed by the chief witness for the presecution and by the scrussel. It was apread that Mac Neill should sall to Frederick Myers a cab and horse for £50—to be paid for by instillments, at the rate of one pound a week. Farther that, in default of such payments being made, the horse and cab should revert to Mac Neill, and that not until the whole sixty pounds was paid over should the horse and cab be transferred absolutely to Myers. Myers took possession of the property, and began his payments as pet agreement. After several payments had thus been made, a dispute arcse between the two parties as to whether the whole of the purchase money had, as had not, been paid over. Mac Neill believed, it appeared that Myers was in his debt, and after demand of payment, threatened to enforce the terms of the agreement. Ditimately he gave a man (named Monk) a written authority to seize the horses. The man who was to act as balliff went to Myers's residence, where he showed his order to Mrs. Myers, and so took the mare awy. This was the only case against the accused that could be proved in evidence. The Solicitor-General, finding that the indictment could not be sustained, abandoned the case, and his Honor directed the jury to discharge the prisoner, as there was no case whatever against him. The prisoner was thoreupon discharged: the Judge informing him (as he felt the dack) that the Court completely exonerted him from the charge which had been preferred against him.

ichael Doyle. There was a count for feloniously relying.
This case (one of no general interest) was proved by the ideace of sergeant Dawson, Michael Doyle, Alexander edibourne, William Andrews, James Russell, and George opgood. The party robbed was an aged man, from whom e watch was stolen (with his money and some clothing), a time when be (Doyle) happened to be intoxicated. The idence went to show that the prisoners had made different tampts to pawn the watch, and had finally succeeded, he watch was seen by a third party in the possession of the of the prisoners. The case was stronger against wenty than Haymond. Raymond's defence was that he deben made an innocent tool of by Sweeny. It was wenty alone who was clearly proved to have pledged some the stolen property.
Verdict: Sweeny, guilty; Raymond, not guilty.
Sentence against Sweeny—Eignteen months' imprisonent, with hard labour. The prisoner Raymond was dislarged.

George Dobbyns, the cashier in Mr. Maegregor's business, also corroborated the evidence of the witness Ward. Alexander Leix proved the marking of the money which had been used in Mr. Maegregor's shop.

This closed the case for the Crown.

A witness named Harhand was called for the defence, but unimportant.

This closed the case for the Crown. A witness pamed Harhad was called for the defence, but his evidence was unimportant.

The learned counsel for the prisoner delivered an eloquent address to the jury, casting total discredit upon the evidence of Ward. He insisted strongly upon the excellent character which the prisoner had borne up to the time of the alleged officence. No marked money on the counter was found on Davis. The marked money on the counter was money that he had lying over on account of his having inadvertently made out the docket for five shillings less than it actually was. The money was lying before Davis, because he had user postedly found that there was a surplus of five shillings, and was trying to recken up how that could be.

The Solicitor-General replied.

The Solicitor-General informed the Court that from what hir. Macgreyor had accordanced since the prisoner's arrost, the defalcations must have been considerable.

Remanded for sentence.

Desis Garwan, James Garwan, Peter Brennan, and Philip Bheridan appeared before the Court, on warrant, charged with unlawfully entering certain premises in Bourke-street, on the 20th July, and expelling therefrom by force one Charles Doyle. It appears that complainant, about five weeks ago, earted a ship's deck-house to a piece of ground in Bourke-street, belonging to the last-named defandant, and was living in it when the defendants came and forcibly ejected him from it. Massra. Williams and Gedys thought the case should be diminised, and the Police Magistrate and Mr. Lester postponed giving their decision until lo-morrow. Mr. D. row of houses within perhaps a hundred yards of the manufactory had been completely guited as far as one could judge from the outside. It was not permitted to enter them, as they were so injured there was no knowing at what moment they might fall; but, looking through the windows, one could see that scarcely an article of furniture had been left whole. Each room was a litter of ruiss, much like rooms I have seen after a shell has burst in them. Yet, strange to say, some of the people in these houses escaped with life. I heard one woman describing how she was dressing when the shock same, and how, though at first thrown violently on her face, she was able to get up at once, and rush down stairs. There, on the ground in fiont of the house, she found some of the bedding that had been thrown out of the window, and was able to cover her self with this until seme kind neighbour lent her a petitioat. In her case the ludicrous rather predominated over the terrible, but I witnessed many heart-rending scenes, as residents who had happened to be absent when the explosion occurred came up in breathless anxiety to get tidings of their relations or friends. The terrible answer was often given with a blunt roughness which in French people struck me as unusual; but the, fact is, that everybody was too scared and awe-struck to scarch for phrases, or try to hide away any thought that came uppermost. I heard one poor woman very coolly told that her husband could not possibly have escaped, as he was seen close to the manufactory. Another, however, who was carrying about a little child's straw hat, with pretty pink nosettes, a strange contrast to the blackened ruins around, eagerly askinut everybody if they had seen a child with a similar that was a little more fortunate; that is, if it is fortunate to be ignorant up to the last moment of a real calamity. One or two good-natured people took pairs to explain to her that the only children they had seen a shild with a similar retreat, utterly scared on suspicion, ard who are, more pro

THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY.

THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY.
Versailles, May 22, 5 p.m.
In the National Assembly, this afternoon, M. Thiers addressed the Chamber, and said:

The cause of right, liberty, order, and civilization is triumphant. Our admirable army is shedding its generous blood and exhibiting its valour. By the aid of the powerful artillery brought into play, the approaches have been pushed forward with great rapidity. It was so difficult an undertaking to drive a sap over so extended a space, that we did not consider that the assault could be made yet for three or four days. General Donai, having observed that the Porte de St. Cloud had been abandoned, sent forward his troops. On the left, General L'Admirault took the gates of Passy and Auteuil, and then turning to the left seized the Arc de Tromphe. General Vinoy, entering the Point du Jour, passed the Seine and opened the gates of Sevres to General Cissy. By 2 o'clock General Cissy was master of the Faubourg St. Germain as far as Mont Parnasse, and General Clinchamps was at the New Opera-house. The slight resistance we have met with warrant us in hoping that Paris will soon be restored to its true sovereign—to France. We are honest men. We will visit with the rigour of the law those men who have been guity of crime against France, and have not shrunk from assassination or the destruction of national monuments. The laws will be rigourously enforced. The expiation shall be complete. (Loud applause.)

M. Jules Simon proposed a bill having for its object the reconstruction of the Colonne Vendome, with a statue of France (Acclamations.)

M. Cochery proposed to vote the thanks of the Assembly to the army and to the chief of the execu-

France. (Acclamations.)

M. Cochery proposed to vote the thanks of the Assembly to the army and to the chief of the executive power.

The vote was agreed to unanimously.

M. Thiers thanked the Assembly and expressed his gratitude for this the highest reward that he could have desired. The confidence of the Assembly would enable him to continue the work of restoration, to which he should devote all his powers. (Prolonged appliance)

M. Jules Simon embraced M. Thiers.

INUNDATIONS IN AMERICA.

INUNDATIONS IN AMERICA.

The Bonnet Carré crevame is 1400 feet wide, says a telegram fr.m Louisiana, and the ends of the great levee are still gradually crumbling foot by foot into the water as the current undermines them. This crevasse, which I have already described, and which is the most extensive on the Mississipi for many years, is on the east side of that river, and the quest in is asked why are the crevasses always on the eastern side? From Cairo to New Orleans all the bluffs on the eastern shore of the Mississippi are caving in. It is said the motion of the earth on its axis, or the results of some general law of nature, cause this uniform and constant abrasion of the left bank. Fort Pillow, near Memphis, an earthwork famous during the rebellion, has wholly disappeared. There is not a vestige left of an earthwork built by the Confederates on the Tennessee shore near Randolph, above Memphis. The river has cutout cavernous depths for its currents beneath the bold hills, and they have crumbled and fallen, hillsides sometimes disappearing in a single night. The work of desolution is mainly upon the eastern side, and so well is this known that property values along that shore have declined many millions of dollars. At Memplis there is especial alarm, for the land is being washed away that protects the city, and inroads upon the buildings are feared. There is a navy yard there upon a portion of which a mortgage was once created. The mortgage subsists, but the property securing it has been disposed of by a power beyond the reach of Chancery. The Missismortgage was once created. The mortgage subsists, but the property securing it has been disposed of by a power beyond the reach of Chancery. The Mississippi selects its own channel, and is vaciliating in itsehoice. At Bonnet Carrè the dread is that the capricious river has chosen this overland path as a short cut to the Gulf, and that New Orleans might possibly be left an inland town. Lake Ponchartrain is but a few miles distant from the point where the crevasse broke. When the levee gave way the surface of the river was 22 feet above the surface of the lake, and the levee about 12 feet above the lake, and the levee about 12 feet high. In the first mile from the river the ground slopes 5 feet towards the lake, so that when the river book through the declivity was 17 feet in the first mile, 12 feet being in the first 105 feet, and the surface a light alluvial soil. The swittness of the current, which runs eight to ten miles an keur, may be insarined, and as force over 600 hours. feet, and the surface a light alluvial soil. The switzness of the current, which runs eight to ten miles an hour, may be imagined, and as from one-fifth to one-sixth of the entire volume of the Mississippi at that point pours through the opening, and thence courses awiftly overland to the lake in a broad deep channel it has cut for itself, the fears of the entire diversion of the river are not unfounded. Thausands of persons visit the crevasse, the scene having a sublime attraction, and the roaring of the waters being heard for ever a mile. Unremitting efforts are made to save the ends of the levee, but they are unauccessful—it still alowly yields to the current. The river has subsided somewhat, but the water is still high and the current irresistible. The lowlands around New Orleans are being gradually overflowed by the water from this great crevasse.

being gradually overflowed by the water from this great crevasse. Another crevasse has occurred—in the Eric Canal in New York—which causes as much comment as Bonnet Carré, as it has entirely suspended navigation on that great canal. It occurred on the 29th of April, ases Rochester, at a point where the canal crosses a swead ravine in a range of hills. To effect this arressing an embankment has been raised 40 feet high, about 150 feet wide at the top. It is not quite a mile long. The ravine above this bank narrows in the hill side, and is flooded to save the cost of building snother embankment, and the water is at the deepest parts about 30 feet deep. The flooded portion covers probably 20 or 30 acres, and below the embankment the ravine stretches away into a low, marshy, and sparsely wooded country. The weight of the water which had been but a few days before let into the canal, proved too much for the bank, which gave way about midnight. Three boats were being towed along the canal at the time, one of them—the Banney Bird—being exactly where the break occurred. The driver cut the tow-line and saved his horses, but the boat was carried into and through the breach by the current, and a mile acr the lowlands, until it ran aground. Two m and a woman performed this perilous m night journey on the canal boat, escap unharmed. The current soon washed a large chan night journey on the canal boat, escaping unharmed. The current soon washed a large channel in the embankment, carrying out not only the side, but the bottom of the canal, and making a breach 160 feet wide. It only cased flowing when all the available water had run out of the level, which is seventeen miles long. To repair it the estimate is that there will be required the labour of 1000 men and 200 horses for a month, and during that time navigation will be suspended. The damage to the canal, and the detention of merchandise are estimated at 1,000,000 dollars. As at Bonnet Carré, the current sought an outlet, sweeping down the ravine and across the low-lands, until it reached Lake Ontario, carrying away yoads, buildings, bridges, milldams, &c., in its course. Large numbers of labourers were this week set to work at Fairport, near Rochester, where the Erie Canal break occurred, but drenching rains at first prevented labour, then a strike occurred, and finally there was a riot that assumed such formidable proportions that two companies of soldiers had to be sent from Rochester to maintain order. Several persons were wounded in the riot, and this morning, after a skirmish, the military succeeded in capturing the leading rioters, and they have been lodged in gaol. This afternoon the strikers surrendered, and the rains abatung, work was resumed, although the troops are still on duty.

ACCIDENT TO PRINCE ARTHUR.

ACCIDENT TO PRINCE ARTHUR.

(From the Times, May 22.)

A very extraordinary and painful accident occurred to his Royal Highness Prince Arthur on Friday evening last, just before the state ball at Buckingham Palace. According to the account we have received, the Prince was leaning against the window of the billiard-room in the palace, which had been imperfectly fastened, when it gave way, and the Prince fell through it on to the pavement below. The distance is about eight feet, and the consequences of such a fall might have been most dangerous. The Prince is said to have fallen in such a manner that, though the back of his head is badly bruised and slightly wounded, the force of the fall was distributed along the whole length of his body, and though the shock was necessarily very great, no other specific injury except that to his head occurred. We are informed, however, that probably in the effort to save himself, the great toe of one foot was dislocated.

The Prince remains at Buckingham Palace, and is reported to be doing well.

HALL'S ARCTIC EXPEDITION.

THE VESSEL AND THE CREW-PLAN OF THE VOTAGE Ins. Vissel, AND THE CHEM-PLAN OF THE VOYAGE. Captain Hall and his party are now on the eve of leaving us for a long and perilous voyage, that will probably cover a period of three years, or perhaps more. We yesterday visited Captain Hall on board of his ship, the Polaris, at the Navy Yard, for the purpose of bidding him good-bye, and wishing him a prosperous and successful voyage. The Polaris, formerly the Periwinkle, is a vessel belonging to the Government, but rebuilt and fitted for this expedition in such a manner as almost to be a new and very superior craft. She is of about 400 tons measurement, considerably larger than the Advance, in which Dr. Kone undertook his famous voyage, and about the same size as the Germania, which left Bremen two years ago on an expedition to the Artene Seas. She has been planked all over her sides with six inches of solid white oak timbers, and has throughout been nearly doubled in strength; her bows being almost a solid mass of timber, sheathed with iron, and terminating in a sharp iron prow with which to cut through the ice. As to those who are going to be the principals in this adventurous and dangerous expedition, they are, all tild, 29 men. There is not a man among them whose qualities and character have not been well tested, from the captain down to the cook. The leader and commander-in-chief is, of course, Captain Hall, next in command comes Captain S. O. Buddington, of New London, an eld whaling-master, of 30 years' experience, 21 of which were spent in the Davis Strait and Baffin's Hay. He is an old and trusted friend of Captain Hall, who has implicit faith in his long experience and acknowledged ability. The second officer is Mr. H. C. Chester, also a whaling mortal to whom it was ever permitted to look upon the open Polar Sea. He had the sad privilege to accompany Dr. Kane to Philadelphia for interment. Mr. Emil Schuman occupies the post of first engineer, and the scientific corps will consist of three gentlemon, one of whom, Dr. Emil Bissels of Heidelberg, Germany, this cutts, sugar, coffee, tea, condensed milk, canned fruits, and all other necessaries for a protracted voyage.

The plan of the voyage will be first to New York, where Joe and Hannah will join the ship, and from there to St. John, Newfoundland, where the Polaris will take on board a fresh supply of coal. From there the route will be to the Danish colonnes of Holsteinborg and Levele, on the west coast of Greenland, and thence to the still more northerly Kaquimaux settlements of Upernaick and Disco, at one of which places a depot will be established. A Government transport has been detailed to accompany the expedition as far as this, carrying coal, lumber, and other heavy articles to this reserve station. In August Septain Hall expects to be able to push up through Jones's Sound, as far as to latitude 80 or 81, where winter quarters will be established, and the dark and dreary winter night passed, during which it is impossible to push further on. But with early spring, or as soon as the weather permits, the voyage will be continued until solid land or ice shall effectually stop further progress, when the expedition will proceed on sledges, to be obtained from the Esquimaux tribes that inhabit this region.— Washington Patriot.

MATRIMONIAL SUPERSTITIONS

In olden days, June was held the most pro pitious month in the twelve for marriage, happy result being rendered doubly certain it the ceremony was timed so as to take place at the full moon, or when the sun and moon were in conjunction. That unimpeachable authority. the Registrar-general, tell us that May is i these later days a favourite marrying month in England, so that one matrimonial superstition has gone the way all such fancies are doomed, has gone the way all such fancies are doomed, sooner or later, to go; for May used to be as much avoided by persons about to marry as June was favoured, that merry month being supposed to be specially under the influence of malignant spirits delighting in domestic discord. "The girls are all stark naught that wed in May," is the verdict of one old saw; another declares—

From the marriages in May

From the marriages in May All the bairns die and decay;

a third pronounces, "Who marries between the sickle and the scythe will never thrive;" while a poet, complimenting the month at the expense of what should be the ruling passion in mar-of what should be the ruling passion in mar-riage minded folks, sings:

"May never was the month of Love,
For May is full of flowers;
But rather April, wet by kind,
For Love is full of showers!"

But if old sayings ruled the world, there would be no marrying at all, for a very old one avers that no man enters the holy state without repenting his rashness before the year is out; un-less, indeed, every body determined, like the old Norfolk farmer, to cheat the adage by wedding

Norfolk farmer, to cheat the adage by wedding on the 31st of December.

In times gone by, candidates for connubiality were obliged to study times and seasons. The Church would not allow them to marry just when they felt inclined. "Marriage," says the register of Norton, "comes in on the 13th of January, and at Septuagesima Sunday it is out again until Low Sunday, at which time it comes in again, and goes not out till Registion. in again, and goes not out till Rogation Sunday; thence it is forbidden until Trinity Sunday, and from thence it is unforbidden Advent Sunday, and comes not again until the 13th of January." That those concerned might better remember the rules, somebody put them into rhyme, running thus :-

Advent marriage doth deny,
But Hilary gives thee liberty;
Septuagesima says thee nay;
Eight days from Easter says you may;
Rogation bids thee to contain,
But Trinity sets thee free again.

It was considered improper to marry upon Inno cents' day because it commemorated the slaughter of the children by Herod; and it was equally of the children by Herod; and it was equally wrong to wed upon St. Joseph's Day. In fact, the whole season of Lent was declared sacred from the intrusion of Hymen's devotees. "Marry in Lent, and you'll repent!" and there are good people among us still who, if they do not believe that bit of proverbial wisdom to be prophetic, undoubtedly think Lenten wedders deserve to find it.

prophetic, undoubtedly think deserve to find it so.

We may possibly be doing a service to some of our readers by informing them on the authority of a manuscript of the fifteenth century, quoted in The Book of Days) that there are just thirty-two days in the year upon which it is unadvisable to go into join-hand—namely, are in January; three each in February, it is unadvisable to go into join-hand—namely, seven in January; three each in February, March, May, and December; two each in April, June, July, August, September, and November; and one in October; so that January is the worst, and October the best month for committing matrimony; the actual unlucky days being these:

January 1st, 2nd, 4th, 5th, 7th, 10th, 15th; February 6th, 7th, 18th; March 1st, 6th, 8th; April 6th, 11th; May 5th, 6th, 7th; June 7th, 16th: July 5th, 19th: August 15th, June 7th, 16th: July 5th, 19th: August 15th June 7th, 16th; July 5th, 19th; August 15th, 19th; September 6th, 7th; October 6th, November 15th, 16th; and December 15th 16th, 17th. As to which is the best day of the week, why-

Tuesday for health;
Wednesday the best day of all;
Thursday for crosses;
Friday for losses;
Saturday no luck at all.

Friday is generally considered an unlucky day in England; but in France the country lasses look upon the first Friday in the month lasses look upon the first Friday in the month as peculiarly favourable, if not for the actual ceremony, at least for determining who will be one of the principal actors in it. Before getting into bed, the curious damsel raises one leg, and plants it against the foot of the bed, hoping by this simple action to induce the patron of bachelors, good St. Nicholas, to show her in her sleep the counterfeit presentment of her destinate. sleep the counterfeit presentment of her destined

Young ladies should abstain from listening to any one whose surname begins with the same letter as their own:—

and they would do well to take the precautio of placing their initials in conjunction with those of any admirer they incline to favour, and ask, like Malvolio, "What should that alphabetical position portend?" for if, of the united initials, any word can be formed, they may be certain the owners of them will never be happy to

It is an unhappy omen for a wedding to be put off when the day has once been fixed. It Sweden, it is believed much harm will ensue i a bridegroom stands at the junction of cross roads, or beside a closed gate, upon his wedding morn. It is a bad sign if the bride fails to shed morn. It is a bad sign if the bride rails to shed tears on the happy day, or if she indulges her-self by taking a last admiring glance at the looking-glass after her toilet is completed; but she may gratify her vanity without danger if she leaves one hand ungloved until beyond temptation. To meet a priest, dog, cat, lizard, or serpent on the way to church—to look back, or to mount many steps before gaining the piness; and, according to north-country notions, it is courting misfortune to marry in green, or while there is an open grave in the churchyard; or to go in at one door and out a another. The weather, too, has a good influence upon affairs; happy is the bride the sun shines on, and, of course, the converse is equally true. Chamberlain, writing to his friend Carleton in 1603, tells him how the wedding of their mutual acquaintance, Mr. Winwood, was celebrated to an accompaniment of thunder, lightning, and rain that was ominou enough to have startled a superstitious mar which, luckily, Winwood was not, so "he turned all to the best," like a loving groom and a wise man. Evil portents may scare the happy pair even after the knot has been tied. "When the bridemaids undress the bride," says Misson, the bridemaids undress the bride," says Misson, describing the marriage merriments of England, "they must throw away and lose all the pins. Woe to the bride if a single one be left about her; nothing will go right! Woe also to the bridesmaids if they keep one of them, for they will not be married before Whitsunide, or till the Easter following, at soonest." Where the Scottish custom is followed of the newly-wedded couple being welcomed home by the husband's mother meeting them at the door, and breaking a current bun over the head of the bride before her foot crosses the threshold, it is thought a very bad omen if the bun be, by any mistake, broken over any head but that to which the honour is due. If a bridal that to which the honour is due. If a bridal party ventures off dry land, they must go up stream; should they be foolhardy enough to go down the water, either the bride, the bridegroom, or one of the bridesmaids will infallibly feed the fishes. Spite of the faith in there being luck in odd numbers, it is a belief in the north of England that one of the wedding guests will die within a year, unless the party counts even. Another comical idea is, that whichever of the Another comical idea is, that whichever of the

Another comical idea is, that whichever of the two, bride or bridegroom, goes to sleep first upon the wedding night, that one will be the first to succumb to death.

We to the bride of Lindisfarne whose legs are too short to allow of her bestriding the Pelting-stone! This is the socket-stone of a ponderous stone cross, erected by the Saxon Bishop Ethelwold, which was broken to pieces by the Danes on their first visit to England't shores. Whenever a marriage takes place as the island church, as soon as the ceremony is over, the bride steps upon the Pelting-stone, over, the bride steps upon the Pelting-stone, and, if she cannot stride to the end of it she knows that her matrimonial venture will prove an unfortunate one — a fancied foreknow-ledge very apt to work its own ful-filment. Such was the case with the widow of Sir Walter Long, of Dray-cott, who, after solemnly promising her dying husband not to remarry, forgot all about it when Sir Stephen Fox came wooing, until, as her second spouse led her into the parlour of her house after returning from church, the picture of Sir Walter fell upon her shoulder, and broke or sir Watter reli upon her shoulder, and broke in the fall—an extraordinary accident the short-memoried lady took as providential warning that her promise-breaking would be avenged, and her second match prove a source of unhap-piness; and she made it so by dwelling always upon the incident and the death-bed called to mind.

The only omens we know of tending to

The only omens we know of tending to encourage adventurers in the great lottery of life, are the meeting of a wolf, spider, or toad on the way to church, and a cat sneezing within the bride's hearing the day before the wedding; but, fortunately, there are many ways of insuring happy fortune. In the Highlands of Scotland, the malicious influence of warlocks and witches used to be kept at bay by preventing an unlocky dog passing between preventing an unlucky dog passing between the couple on their road to church, and by taking care the bridegroom's left shoe bore no latchet and buckle. By using gray horses in the bridal carriage, the same good purpose is effected. Swedish bridegrooms sew garlic, chives, and rosemary in their wedding garments, to frustrate the evil designs of the trolls and sprites; and the attendants on the lady carry bouquets of the same herbs in their hands; while the bride herself fills her pockets with bread, which she dispenses to any poor way-farers she espies as she goes to church, every piece she gets rid of averting a misfortune; the gift, however, is of no use to the receiver, since, if he eats it, he thereby brings the misfortune upon his own head. Manxmen find a pocketful of salt equally efficacious. The brides of Elba go bare-headed to church; and while the ceremony is proceeding, the happy man puts his knee upon the bride's dress, preventing evil spirits putting in their undesired presence and whispering words in the bride's ear which would render the priest's prayer for fertility utterly inoperative. Women married at Jarrow need no prayers to make them joyful mothers bouquets of the same herbs in their hands need no prayers to make them joyful mothers of many children, that end being attained by sitting themselves down in the chair of the sitting themselves down in the chair of the Venerable Bede as soon as the parson has done his part. In some parts of England, good luck is supposed to be insured by a friend making a hen cackle in the house of the wedded pair. In China they have a curious ceremony, believed to be a never-failing means of making a marriage turn out well for the lady. When she has taken her place in the sedan in which she is to be carried to her future home, her father and mother, or other near relatives, hold a bed-quilt up by its other near relatives, hold a bed-quilt up by it four corners in front of the bridal chair. Into this one of the bride's female cronies tosses one by one, four break-cakes (the gift of th bridegroom's family), sending them up high in air; while the lady most concerned in the matter repeats without ceasing certain sentences invoking happiness upon herself and spouse, to which the company assembled respond with the Chinese equivalent for "Amen."

The Cornish well of St. Keyne possesses The quality—that man and wife, Whose chance or choice attains,
First of this sacred stream to drink,
Thereby the mastery gains;
but in Sweden the damsel ambitious of ruling her lord as well as his house, can attain her wish by mere contriving to see him on the bridal morning before he sees her; or, failing in this, she has yet another chance at the last moment, by putting her right foot before that of the man when they approach the altar.

The lately revived custom of throwing shoes

after a newly wedded couple for luck, is a very old one. In the Isle of Man the shoe is thrown after bride and bridegroom as they leave their respective abodes; but the ceremony is genery performed elsewhere, upon the depe the hero and heroine of the day for honeymoon trip. In some parts of Kent the shoe-throwing does not take place until after they have gone; when the single ladies range themselves in one line, and the bachelors range themselves in another. An old shoe is then thrown as far as the thrower's strength permits, and the ladies race after it, the winner being rewarded by the assurance that she will be married before any of her rivals. She then throws the shoe at the gentlenien, the one she hits laying the same pleasing unction to his heart. Something like this is practised, too, in Yorkshire and Scotland. In Germany it used to be the rule for the bride cermany it used to be the rule for the bride, as she was being conducted to her chamber, to take off her shoe and throw it among the guests, who battled for its possession, the successful he or she being held destined to be speedily married and settled. In England, the bride, from between the sheets, threw her left stocking over the shouldest speedily married and settled. bride, from between the sheets, turew ner sets stocking over the shoulder of one of the company, the person upon whom it fell being marked out as the next individual to be married. In some places, the threshold is kept warm for another bride by pouring a kettleful of hot water down the door-steps, as soon as the bride and bridegroom have taken their departure; the fancy being, that before the water dries up fancy being, that before the water dries up, another match will be made up, or "flow on," and that it will not be very long before another wedded couple passes over the same ground. In Prussia, the method adepted of invoking blessings on a newly married pair used to be the more expensive one of smashing crockery against the door of the house in which they was desirable.

The breaking of a wedding-ring is an omen that its wearer will soon be a widow. A correspondent of Notes and Queries found this fancy current in Essex a few years ago. A man had been murdered in that country, and his widow said: "I thought I should soon lose him, for I broke my wedding-ring the other day; and my sister too lost her husband after breaking her my stater too lost her husband after breaking her ring. It is a sure sign!" Such superstitious notions are far more prevalent than one would suppose, and the schoolmaster will have to work hard and long before they are entirely eradicated in our land.—Chambers.

THOUGHTS ON PUFFING.

(From All the Your Round.) WITH the enormous crowd of bright particular With the enormous crowd of bright particular advertisements staring at us in every violent and fiery hue from pillar, post, and hearding, it might be curious to speculate what special feelings or motives are working in the public mind, and are at the bottom of this extraordinary development of advertising. The change within a few years is amazing. Development, indeed, is not the proper description; it is rather the introduction of a new art or department. Formerly, the sole object of a placard or advertisement was to give the public information—notice that some event was to information-notice that some event was to take place, that some play was to be performed, or some book was to be published. The occasional "dead wall" was consecrated to this office, and its decaying surface was turned to a useful and honourable purpose. Now, walls, dead and living, flaunt, and flare, and blaze with proclamations, competing with each other, struggling to attract notice, screaming, as it were, tossing their limbs wildly, flourish-ing every known colour, as who should say, "Look at me! Look at me! Not at him! Not at him!" Not only are stray and unoccu-Not at him!" Not only are stray and unoccu-pied walls, or short-lived hoardings, taken advantage of, but new structures—vast screens -are put up, on which these polychromatic names may flaunt and flash. Rooms, walls, railways, every spare space conceivable, are thus decorated with names and addresses. The title of a play, or of a new candle, jogs by at a slow trot in front of the knees of the outside of an omnibus; it glares at us from the roof of a railway carriage, from the gallery of a railway station, from the walls of a waiting-room, from the tax-gatherer's notice, and even from the drop-scene of a theatre.

A curious speculation connected with this profuse advertising is as to how the system is found to work on the public mind. The theory is, that the fact of seeing the one name and address repeated in every direction that we turn o, must be an argument for, or even a proof of, excellence; a conclusion certainly illogical. A little margin might be allowed for human lazi-ness, which would be appealed to after this fashion. For this ready information saves us the trouble of choosing or seeking out, and sup-plies us at once with name and address. But plies us at once with name and address. But, still, the other influence prevails in the main. Even for minds of strong sense there is a lurking feeling that what is known to us from repetition must have something to recommend it; there is even the feeling of good will from the familiarity; just as the British playgoer likes his old jokes, at which he has laughed "these twenty years," as Diggory did at "ould grouse in the gunroom." served up again and again to him. The room, served up again and again to him. The wisest and most sober cannot deny this super-ficial influence. What we are told again and again, leaves at last an impression of respect. The feeling is no doubt akin to that on which The feeling is no doubt akin to that on which general impostors trade in society, in politics, and in literature, and by which some flashy, showy man attracts the public without real qualities. The world, in truth, likes these plain appeals to its desires, and dislikes all troublesome appeals to its judgment and intellect. These gaudy descriptions save it trouble, and tickle both eye and ear; and it may be affected, in a small degree, like the rustic from some agricultural district come up to "Lunnon." some agricultural district come up to "Lunnon," who thinks everything "in print" and gaudy colours must stand for truth and reality in its strictest shape. Advertisers and flourishers know perfectly well that even the gravest and most cautious are to a certain length touched by their appeals, and that even in the act of denunciation, the most careful of them often find themselves seduced.

But the truth is, in this world sheer labor and industry always make themselves felt. This is a theory that would be dear to Mr. Carlyle as representing something real and genuine. Work, he would tell us, is never thrown away. Men who spend sums of money and sums of trouble and toil, together with much and sums of trouble and toll, together with much ingenious polychromatic device in flourishing their names and wares, are pretty certain to find such bread as they have cast upon the waters returning to them. The wise who travel in the underground railways and see "Kitto's Starch" staring at them from over the heads of their vis-a-vis in the carriages, or the "Grass-hopper Sewing Machine," no doubt salute those titles with a "pish!" and a "pshaw!" But later, as their eye wanders over the newspaper, or dead wall, or live hearding, or omnibus knife-board, or fly-leaf of magazine, and sees Starch," "Grasshopper Sewing Machine," a kind of dull, insensible impression is produced. By-and-bye, when either of these important necessaries are in demand in the reader's family, and when there is an impression of doubt or ignorance, the poor aide-de-camp of conceit, or conscious superiority, steps in, and aids the advertiser. Where all are groping in the dark, it is hard to resist the conscious sense of superiority. "Starch! Why, there is superiority. "Starch! Why, there is a fellow called Kitto, who seems to be in great demand; at least his name is everywhere. Sewing machine! Get the Grasshopper—only four guineas." It will thus be seen that advertising owes a good deal to the pardonable little infirmities of our nature.

This feeling of attraction and partiality being thus produced exactly in proportion to the diligent and costly nature of the advertisement, it is surprising that we, the public, do not reflect that all this must represent a vast enhancement of the cost of the arti-cle. A moment's reflection would show us that cle. A moment's reflection would show us that this spurious prestige of name, as compared with the meagre reputation of articles not thus heralded, must make an enormous difference in the price. But no. If anything, they are cheaper. This, in fact, is the claim they boast to our attention. Who, then, defrays the cost of proclamation? The article itself, which, in a manner, must be mulcted and made inferior. There is no other solution. Granting that the There is no other solution. Granting that the article is superior to its rivals, it ought to be far dearer in price to cover the cost of its adver-tisement, but this would be fatal to its success; and in most instances there must be an inferierity.

We might imagine Goldsmith's Citizen of the We might imagine Goldsmith's Citizen of the World coming to town, wandering through this great city, and asking, with amazement, the meaning of the gaudy and bewildering inscrip-tions which would meet his eye at every turn. He would be told they were the names of persons, their addresses, and of various articles made by them. He would speculate thoughtfully over this information, and would at last arrive at a solution. "Ah! it was as in a time of famine or of scarcity. These things and persons are difficult to discover. Their goods are scarce, and this information is welcome."

On the contrary, he is told that there is an oversupply of these merchants and their articles: on the contrary, he is told that there is an oversupply of these merchants and their articles; that at every street and alley they are to be found; and that it is actually in consequence of the superfluity and superabundance that this method of appealing to the public is adopted. It would be hard to get him to understand more than this. It is wonderful, indeed, how the system has developed, and is developing. It now requires skilled agents, professional adepts, to work it. Whereever there is space of any description, no such remunerative disposition of it can be made as by advertising. The letters grow larger, the colour more garish every day. Sometimes we see the whole side of some tall house all ablaze with gigantic characters, which not only those who run, but those whe gallop, and who travel by limited mail even, can read. To pass by the enclosure of the houses levelled for the new Law Courts is enough to give one a nightmare. the enclosure of the houses levelled for the new Law Courts is enough to give one a nightmare. For there, the space being so ample, the situation so advantageous, from the enormous traffic passing and repassing, running and reading, the system seems literally to riot in all the vagaries of competition. There a simpering lady of some eight or ten feet high curls her finger, as if to make or hard the result of Mrs. Allen's treatment.

There the Daily Telegraph proudly trumpets that it has the largest circulation in the world; the horn of the Standard competes angrily, and the horn of the Standard competes angruy, and lays vigourous claim to being the largest broad-sheet in the world. There the cabalistic "Ozokerit" tormented the minds of the passers-by for months; and there the daring performance of some "Brothers," vividly por-trayed on a bill of the dimensions of a small heatrical scene, entertains the eyes as well as the mind. Now the picture of the battle at the Agricultural Hall shows French and Germans destroying each other on a vast scale, while the destroying each other on a vast scale, while the blessings of peace are illustrated by innumerable young ladies, who, bent over rival sewing-machines, exhibit models of decorous and interesting industry. Now, again, an enormous face, whose corresponding body, if it came into being, would reach half-way up Dr. Johnson's St. Clement's Danes Church, presents us with a terrible enlargement of the countenance of the ingenious Mr. Woodin.

In short, a more mysterious jumble of letters, shows, pictures, and colours, it would be hard to conceive. Here is the latest enormous panorama, for such it is, or apotheosis of Neptune, crowned, with all his monsters and Tritons rising from the billows, which makes a sort of Turneresque pageantry of advertisement, spreading over the hoarding in a free high art fashion. This is "Sea Moss Farine;" and this gaudy mythological picture pursues us in every direction. The persevering young ladies who are walking with umbrellas have thrust out the gentleman who was always in a storm of wind and rain struggling with his, which was determined to turn itself inside out. was determined to turn heart mean.

Here, again, is the cake with the mincing gentleman, and the dainty young lady in the veil, preparing to cut it up, and the mincing gentleman, and the dainty young lady in the veil, preparing to cut it up, and the news overhead that some thousand or so of these articles are always kept in stock. Here is to be seen the vast garden, of a rather yellowish green, which a young lady in a that, attended by a child, is watering diligently with a force-pump. But the most assiduous proclaimer of his own merits is a certain West-end silk-mercer, who has become like a household word from his never-flagging invitations to try silks. As we travel in the railway carriages he whispers in our ear—indeed the underhe whispers in our ear—indeed the under-ground line seems to be his special hunting-ground, where in all the sheen and glory of enamelled iron he blazes out his trophies. enamelled iron he blazes out his trophies. There are galleries in this subterranean region, which cross the line aloft for the convenience of played, on vast sheets of gaudy metal, all the style and title of the silk-mercer; an inscription about fifty feet in length. No one, not even the traveller from New Zealand himself, could avoid being impressed by a name exhibited so persistently.

Seriously, this last gigantic exhibition suggests, in practical shape, the thought that this practice has reached the limits of an abuse, practice has reached the limits of an abuse, and that there must be a large section of the public, the majority in fact, who are sensible and experienced, and not to be attracted by such baits. These are fairly entitled to such entertainment as an intellectual and cultivated entertainment as an intellectual and cultivated person, living in a great city, ought to find for their eyes and thoughts as they walk abroad. Now to find one's eyes settling on these monstrous placards wherever they turn, these raree-shows of cartoons and colours, daubed on, certainly becomes a daily and hourly pain. There is no such cheap and pleasant pain. There is no such cheap and pleasant education for a people as handseme out-door objects, elegant vistas and buildings, beautiful grown familiar, humanise almost better than grown familiar, humanise almost better than a dozen school boards. But if instead of these we have this mercantile vulgarity staring from every coigne of vantage, this glorified shop-keeping, which can only raise associations of the prosy and baser incidents of trade, the result must only be a steady and progressive vulgarisation. Any one who would vividly realise this truth for himself, need only become a frequent passenger on the underground lines, from whose stations he will find himself emerging with a steadily increase. himself emerging with a steadily increas-ing sense of distaste, and a low tone of moral feeling. In fact, the New Zealand citizen before alluded to, taken to a series of these stations, would naturally conclude, from the gigantic name that runs across all the galleries, that this tradesman was a sort of deified potentate, in whose honour these sub-terranean temples were erected. The conclusion would be quite legitimate. But the notion is a false and corrupt one; for a light iron galis a false and corrupt one; for a light iron gallery, if artistically constructed, is an object of interest, and leaves an airy and elegant impression; but if it be converted into a Patagonian sign-board, with the enormous name of an ordinary shopkeeper sprawling over it, the limit is passed. It becomes an affront to the travelling public. The worst of it is that we seem to be only at the beginning of this abuse. Our newspapers are swelling into vast unmanageable advertising sheets, and what is more significant still, tradesmen's goods are being dragged on the stage itself for the purpose of puffery. And this unworthy use of theatres proves yet more clearly how much our other public amusements are likely to be interfered with as the abuse develops. For, after paying a sufficient price to be amused, we naturally resent having our eyes entertained by these business circulars and shop-keeping allurements.

On the whole, therefore, it may be fair to

The Sydney Morning Merald.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 1, 1871.

THE establishment of the Government of The establishment of the Government of France has been accomplished in a few days. Mutations proceeded with railroad energy, and with electric speed. If we are to give credit to all our telegram relates, the reparation of Paris will be as marvellous as its destruction. What strikes us with wonder is the minute statement of losses and gains. is the minute statement of losses and gains. The Government will, however, proceed with unexampled vigour. They have a population to keep in order, and to give them employment is of the first importance. Subsequent information will doubtless very much abate many alarming facts lately published in separate items. The erroneous statements, however, which have intermingled with them can have a prolony and it is to be recognited. ever, which have intermingled with them can have no apology, and it is to be regretted there are no means by which men who sit down and invent a series of connected state-ments, without foundation, may be made responsible for them, often, as they are, pro-ductive of great and lasting mischief.

their designs. M. THIERS will be enabled thus to carry out his programme, and to defer the final reconstitution of the Government to a final reconstitution of the Government to a constituent body, chosen, as he hopes, in a calmer moment and under better auspices. The opinions of any man on the nature of government seemed of little importance during the war waged for existence. The object then was to save France. Monarchists and Republicans, and even Communists, united in the same council Chamber, and fought in the same ranks. Council Chamber, and fought in the same ranks.

A question of politics, the ostentation of party, would then have been absurd. The time will come when particular opinions will reappear in all their force, and the only interest we can have in their direction is that they may be adapted to the conficient of the nation, and rapable of enabling them to the nation, and rapable of enabling the nation of the nation. resume a fair weight in the balance of the

It does not follow that M. THIERS'S It does not follow that M. THERA'S opinions are, however, to determine the policy of France. No man is better capable of perceiving the necessity of temporising or acapting the principles of government to the situation. Still it is highly interesting to know what such a man has thought and written. We may then at least trace the connection of one principle with another, and we may even conjecture what M. and we may even conjecture what M.
THIERS is likely to do if his power corresponded with his will. For many years, the writings and speeches of M. THIERS have been the subject of our constant examination. Not only his work on the Revolution lution, and one on the Consulate and the Empire, but his speeches given fully in the French newspapers, and many published sepa-rately as pamphlets, have come under our observation. These works disclose a mind of a very high type, eminently French, or French above all things. M. THIERS, in religion, is what is called a philosopher in his country. He holds the opinions of VOLTAIRE, but as a personal belief. In this he is free from the bitterness which often characterises scepticism. He believes that the Catholic religion, being that of the vast majority of the people, ought to be upheld by the State. His estimate of the political position of the State is partly expressed in the words of Hume, that religions in the eyes of the philosopher are equally false, that in the eyes of the populace they are equally true, and in the eyes of the magistrate they are equally useful. M. THIERS has always maintained the tem-

M. IHIERS has always maintained the tem-poral power of the Pore. He approved of the expedition to Rome; and he condemned the poincy which weakened the authority of the Pentiff. We have not seen any record of his sentiments on the Ecumenical Council. Of course, with the avowal which he made when speaking on the subject of the Papacy, as he was not a believer although a friend, the decisions of that body would not bind his conscience. We should imagine that he saw the whole affair with deep regret as weakening the temporal power. What he maintained was, that France, being the head of the Catholic nations, was the natural protector of the Papacy; that in this policy it would command the suffrages of all the races that adhered to that faith; that it would hold in check, the rival Russian empire, and extend a shield over those fragmentary communities which elsewhere followed the Roman cross, He would therefore have employed the arms of France in detence of the sovereign Pontifi of sound policy.

M. THIERS has always been an opponent of the unity of Italy as mischievous to the French nation, as well as fatal to the Papacy He has judged truly that the monarch of twenty-four millions will govern in spite of traditions, and that the l'apal authority will be as little regarded in Rome as in London. he is perfectly aware that the mere pomp of office will have no real influence against the power that has the keys of the prisons and the fortresses of Italy. We are not arguing the fortresses of Italy. We are not arguing the wisdom of his ideas but merely stating them. If M. THIERS had, therefore, full power to re-establish the Papacy, and to bring it practically into a state of very mild and timid independence, indisposed to innovate, he would certainly do it.

In reference to the Protestant population in France, the language of M. THIERS has always been in the tighest degree complialways been in the figurest degree or four years mentary. We remember three or four years ago when he told the Legislative Corps, and always had been for that they were and always had been for centurier among the most intelligent and useful subjects of France, and when he even went so far as to give them the palm of superiority, he was met with loud outcties. In fact, his philosophy had liberated him from those intense animosities by which people are made incapable of acknowledging any good in an opponent. He therefore, without treabling himself to inquire into the causes, admitted the facts as they appeared Bearing these points in mind, our readers will perceive that the greatness of France was the basis of M. THIRR'S policy in pressing the Catholic system; but he is the last man who from religious fanaticism would assume the banner of the cross, and go upon a the banner of the cross, and go upon a crusade. He will not certainly send an arned force to reverse the policy of Italy. He will admit just as much of the facts accomplished as may appear definite and irrevocable. He will certainly give no weight by law to the new dogma, opposed with such vehamence by the new Archbishop of Paris. But he will not in any distinct form recognize the abelition of the temporal power. The Papal system will admit of the absyance The Papal system will admit of the absyance of the question, since when two ambassadors come before the Pork, it will be competent for one to hold him as a spiritual head, and for another to recognise him as a temporal sovereign. He will be so far in the position of our QUEEN. A Roman Catholic Peer acknowledges her as the Sovereign of Green Pairies. Great Britain, whom he is bound to obey, but not as the head of the Church, which the Lord Chancellor declares her to be. The hinge of controversy is the same, only in the case of our Sovereign, that part of her in the case of our Sovereign, that part title which remains undisputed is perhaps in her opinion the best part, sinner that she is, God bless her.

On the whole, therefore, we imagine that the question of the temporal power will take its course, and that no effort will be made to enforce a recognition of the accomplished fact either upon the Catholic Courts, or upon the King of Italy. They will allow the Pork to express himself very strongly, and trust to the softening influence of time. Once a year from the Vatican there used to be a proclamation of curses which had dropped into proclamation of curses which had dropped into a mere habit both against those who held hostile opinions, or any portion of ecclesi-astical property. But after a few years, if these angry expressions are repeated they will be recorded by the reporters only as the usual formulas. The policy of France will remain undefined, but the support of the clergy—of which there are some 40,000—will continue. We must, however, reserve our description of M. Thiers's opinions on other subjects.

A SCHEME has been lately broached in Vic-toria which has perhaps suffered somewhat in public estimation from being too am-bitious, but which yet has tended to turn making attention in a profitable direction bitious, but which yet has tended to turn public attention in a profitable direction. This was a proposal to intercept the waters flowing into the Upper Murray, and convey them by irrigating canals along the northern and western portion of the colony—following in fact the general course of the river, but at as very general inspection of a map is sufficient to show. The northern and north-western portion of the colony is moderately level. The river finds its way to the sea by a gentle fall, but by a very sinuous course, and by straightening that course the water could be distributed over a very large area.

That such a use of what now runs to waste would add to the productiveness of the soil there can be no doubt. Sun and water heat and moisture—are the two great wealthproducers in the agricultural line. Hitherto Victoria has become rich and famous mainly by its gold; but though its mines are not exhausted, they are exhaustible. Gold does not grow, and every year the deposit becomes more scarty and the search for it more precarious. But the soil is a perennial source of wealth, and the more money that is put into it the more is taken out. The natural pastures have already yielded a large and constant return, and have increased that yield wherever judicious improvements have been made. But there is no improvement equal in importance to an ample and constant supply of water. Nature fur-nishes the sun, and we cannot regulate either the quantity or the distribution of its heat. Nature also furnishes the waters, and we cannot regulate the rainfull; but we can regulate the surface distribution of the water. We can store it; we can guide its descent to the sea, and make it meander We can store it; we can guide so as to slake the thirst of many a sun-parched

But though these general truths may be readily acknowledged, it requires a great amount of detailed investigation before we can say what would be the cost of any given project, or what would be the revenue derivable from it. We are at present but in the infancy of our hydraulic science, and it would be recovered. would be more prudent and more modest to make our first trials, and get our first expe-rience on a small scale, when errors would be less costly, and when success would be just as instructive. In a matter involving large appropriation of the surface water and the treatment of a large area of territory, it is also doubtful whether the Government ought not to undertake the duty, rather than leave private enterprise to acquire vested rights which might become adverse to the general interest of the community. The Victorian Government has undertaken the Coliban rian Government has undertaken the Coliban scheme for the supply of the miners with water, and the Yan Yean scheme for the supply of the citizens of Melbourne, and it would with equal propriety undertake the management of a Murray scheme to supply agricultural and pastoral occupiers with vater. The minor water works on the cold-The minor water-works on the goldfields have all been private speculations. They could not well have been otherwise; but even there conflicting rights have often arisen, and very embarrassing controversies have been provoked. It is one of the duties of the Government to survey possible waterways as well as to survey possible railways, and the Survey Office might advantageously employ some of its agents in preparing plans of the water resources of the country. Even if the practical application of the knowledge should practical application of the knowledge should be left to private speculators the preparation of it would be a useful guide as to the concessions proper to be made; and just as the geological survey has been a help and a stimulus to the miners, so an squeous survey would be a help and a stimulus to the makers of canals, It is also perhaps worthy of remark that as the south bank of the Murray is the boundary between the two colonies, the water in the river belongs to New South Wales, and any attempt to divert the main stream would require the assent of this Government. While on the subject of water, we cannot refrain from expressing our surprise at the apathy of the citizens of Sydney as to the prospects of the city water supply for the next few years. A long-continued rainy season seems to have caused the matter to drop out of sight, though the citizens are reminded every afternoon by the shutting off of the water for a few hours, that the Corporation still finds it necessary to check waste. In this still finds it necessary to check waste. In this climate of extremes it is not only probable, but it is morally certain that an exceptionally wet season will be followed by an exceptionally dry one; and what adequate preparations are being made for such a contingency? The official reports of the engineer at Botany show that the demand is increasing with very great rapidity. Until the Lachlan swamp dam and its accompanying engine works are completed, there will be no additional storage or machinery for supply; and when this work is done it will only suffice for a short time. The increasing demand is Schewa, respected in Sydney, before a tolerably numerical storage or machinery for supply; and Section, I should be supplied to the supplied of the supplied to the supplined to the supplied to the supplied to the supplied to the suppli inevitable. With our present requirements a drought such as we have already experienced. would much more quickly tell upon our comforts than heretofore; the storage reservoirs would more quickly give out, and the citizens would earlier and longer be placed on short allowance. With a severer drought than we have as yet known—and after an unprecedented rainfall, it is not unreasonable to expect an unprecedented scarcity of rain—the discomforts of the citizens scarcity of rain—the discomforts of the citizens would be greater than any yet experienced, and great will be the outcry. If we could improvise a water supply at short notice, this indolence would be of little importance; but it is notorious that it takes a long time to carry out extensive works. During the late session the question was asked, whether the Government colony before his return to India, and the answer was, that the Government had not made up its mind to do so. It is to be presumed, from his selection by the Indian Government, that he is a competent hydraulic vernment, that he is a competent hydraulic engineer, and, from the manner in which the Government is acting in Victoria, it would seem that his advice is considered satisfactory. He would probably be the most valuable person the Government here could find to advise them with respect to the city water supply, and if he could spare the time to come, his opinion might go a long way towards making clear the course that ought to be

St. Matthias's, Paddington,—A successful res meeting and concert was held in the Oddfellows' Hall, Paddington, on Friday evening last, the proceeds to be davoted to paying off the debt on the above church. After tes, which was partaken of by about 250 persons, the room was cleared for the concert, the chair being taken by the Rev. Dr. Barry, the incumbent. By this time the hall was densly crowded. The programma, which comprised selections of songs and dustic by lady and gentlemen amsteurs, was creditably given. After the last duct, the meeting was addressed by the Rev. Dr. Barry, who, in complimenting those who had been instrumental in getting up the entertainment on the great success achieved, took occasion to allude to matters in connection with the church, and sketched out, what he facelicusly termed, a programme which would give them all shough to do for some time to come. While congratulating his parishiners on the fact that the debt on the church was now merely nominal, he drew their attention to the laneariable want which still existed of a parsonage, that the church required calarging and beautifying, a new schoolroom was required, and as these objects might soon be brought more prominently under their notice, all might be prepared to enter with spirit into doing the work there was to do. The National Anthens was usug; and the noccing separated.

BATHURBT-STREET BAPTIST CHURCH.—Special services, to commemorate the anniversary of this Church and the pastor's arrival, were held on Sunday,—the Rev. J. Greenwood, M.A., preaching in the morning, and the Rev. J. Greenwood, M.A., preaching in the morning, and the Rev. J. Greenwood, the pastor, presided. The following clergymen were present:—The Rev. A. Burdett, S. C. Kent, A. W. Webb, G. G. Howden, C. Hardy, R. N. Morris, B.A., and T. Johnson, Mr. E. G. W. Falmer, the secretary read the annual report, from which it appeared that the ablies of the Church were in a prosperous condition. The Subbath congregations had largely increased during the year; and the siteadance at the week hight services were also very encouraging. Twenty-four persons had been received into the Church during the twelve months. The Sunday school and other agundes in connection with the Church were reported to be in a satisfactory state. A debt of £87 had been liquidated, £70 collected for alterations to the church, and £125 raised fer a testimenial for the late pastor, the Rev. Mr. Voller, beddes the provision of ordinary income for minister's austentiation and other purposes. The meeting was aldressed by various ministers during the course of the evening, and closed with the benediction.

The Close Season—Game.—Vesterday was

by various ministers during the course of the evening, and closed with the benediction.

THE CLOSE SEASON—GAME.—Yesterday was the last day of the shouting season. Spertamen must, therefore, be careful not to violate the "Act to provide for the preservation of imported game, and, during the breading season, of native game." The close season will continue to the 31st December. There are in the Act heavy ponalties for killing or destroying native game out of season, or for having it in possession during the period of prohibition; and also for taking or destroying the eggs of "game" are included phessants, partridges, grouse, hares, doet, swans, antelopes, and all birds not indigenous to Australia. "Native game" includes "wild ducks of any species, test, smp, native companions, wild turkey, black awans, wild grees, bronzewing and other wild pigeons, malles hear, qual, isandrali, curiew, tallegalls or brush turkey, plover, and the laughing jackass."

BURGLARY.—A very daring burglary was perpetrated on Sunday evening last at a house in Surry Hills, the thief or thieve, in this instance, apparently getting off clear with their booty. The circumstances are as follows:

—Mr. J. Hedges, of 286, Grown-street, on getting home from church in the evening with his family, found that in his absence his house had been ranached—that deaks, boxe, and drawers had been opened, and the more valuable portions of their contents abstracted and appropriated, and that a considerable sum of menry was also intening. The property missing from his premises is estimated by Mr. Hedges at £20.

Hedges at 220.

WORMS IN SHEEP.—At the late Mudgee Pastoral Society's meeting some discussion arcse on the ground touching the correspondence lately published in the Hersit on the above disease. Mr. Higgins, a very large squatter in the north, stated that his flocks had sufficed very severely, and he had put himself to considerable trouble to investigate the subject. He found, at the outside, in every case where he had made post-meriem examinations, the presence of tape-worm, and had since uniformly administrated turpentine, when the abosp became affected, with invariable success. Mr. Charles Cur stated that he had seen one or two cases amongst his flocks, and corroborated Mr. Higgins as to the existence of tape-worm in the intentions of all the sheep he had examined after death. It was however stated that very great care was necessary in administering turpentine, and that in the hands of ignorant people the outer was worse than the disease.

THE CARANDINIS.—Having just returned from San Francisco, Madaine Carandini and her daughters Rosina, Isabella, Fannis, and Lizzia, assisted by Mr. Walser Sherwin, reappeared in Sydney, before a tolerably numerous audience, in the Masonic Hall, last evening. Their reception was very gratifying. Madaine Carandini, on stepping on the platform, was greeted with prolonged applause, and for her rendering of the old song, "Annie Laurie," in which bet in which bet in which bet in which the harmony of their united voices was displayed with a very pleasing effect. Miss Rosina and Miss Fannis were both encored for solos given by them; and their execution of part song, sasisted by Mr. Sherwin, was also highly commendable. Miss Liszie Carandini, a younger daughter, made her debut, under very pleasing auspices, being encored for her rendering of the song, "Alas, these chimes." The concert was closed with the amuning dust, "Trust her not," in which the parts were very well executed by Miss Rosina and Miss Fannis. The entertainments are announced to be continued on this and succeeding evenings throughest the week.

COMPLIMENTARY CONCERT.—There was given.

evenings throughout the week.

COMPLIMENTARY CONCERT.—There was given, last evening, in the Temperance Hall, to Mrs. King, as a recognition of her services in commercion with the various divisions of Sons and Daughters of Temperance in this city, a complimentary concert, which, notwithstanding the numerous sitractions elsewhere, was attended by about one hundred and fifty persons. The chair was occupied by Mr. F. King. The programme provided for the occasion was a lengthy and attractive one; the concluding item being the usual finals—the Battonal Anthem. The following is diseased guardenen gave their services as vocalists:—Mrs. King and Mrs. Robertson, Missen West, Brown, Tibblitts, and Ecler, and Messrs, Burnett, Hagerty, and Robinson. A Golden Shoe Dance was performed by Messrs. Shapter and Consolly. Miss Merton sched as accompaniet.

A SINGUIAR DEBLANCE A singular decare in

A SINGULAR DREAM.—A singular dream is mentioned by the Cornwall Chronicle, which says:—"Am old man, known only by the sobriquet 'Jeff,' a splitter, was asiesp in his hut at Bridgenorth, on the West Tamar, on Friday night (the night of the guest storan), whom he dreams that he was about to be killed, and a woke in gust error. He sesized his trousers, and fortunately waited for no other clothing, as he had barely time to get to a safe distance from his hut, when a tree fall upon it and crashed it to atoms. He then made for the nearest house, and related what had happened to him."

OUR MELBOURNE LETTER.

THE new Ministry have got through their urst week of Parliamentary work. That werk, how ever, has been mostly of a preliminary character, and as jet there is no rehable evidence of the strength or weakness of the Government. They have introduced some of the bills which are in cluded in their programme, none of them very elaborate or imposing measures, and they have takes the necessary steps to enable the Treasurer to make his financial statement on Tuesday. Thursday evening was one of some excitement. takes the increasary steps to enable the Treasarer to make his financial statement on Tue sday. Thursday evening was one of some excitement in the Assembly, owing to a ficroe combat between the late Minister of Lands, Mr. Macpherson, and the Chief Secretary. The speech of the latter, when before his constituents, derived a good deal of its force from his attacks on the land administration of Mr. Macpherson, and the announcement that under the new Ministry a new epoch had commenced, and that the lands which the last Government withheld from the people would be made theirs by the more liberal administration of Mr. Grant. Some bitter things were said, not only by Mr. Duffy, but also by some of his colleagues, of Mr. Macpherson, from which he claimed the right to exonerate himself on Thursday night. The debate waxed warm, and at times descended to personalities which did not improve anybody's temper. Mr. Macpherson dealt specifically with every one of the allegations made against him, and not only defended himself, but occasionally assumed the aggressive, and laid charges at the doors of his opponents. One of the matters referred to by Mr. Macpherson, awail as other appears. defended himself, but occasionally assumed the aggressive, and laid charges at the doors of his opponents. One of the matters referred to by Mr. Macpherson, as well as other speakers, was the extraordinary spectacle of Messrs. Duffy and Longmore occupying seats with Mr. Graut on the Ireasury benches, after the scathing sarcasms to which the latter gentleman had been subjected at the kands of the two former not very long ago. Mr. Duffy, however, excuses himself for having been provoked to use severe language towards Mr. Grant, and asserts that on almost every question of importance he has been found on the same side of the House in the division-list with his present colleagues. While the new Ministry claim credit for the inauguration of a new system of administering the Lani Act, Mr. Macpherson asserts that they are only carrying out the very practices which he introduced, and that there is nothing new in their policy. The points in dispute are not of sufficient thereset to distant readers to refer to in detail, and I shall not therefore weary you by attempting to define them. The deliver except the test of the transit.

ent interest to distant readers to refer to in detail, and I shall not therefore weary you by attempting to define them. The debate served to let off a fittle of the ill-feeling which unhappily exists on both sides, but the business of the country was in no way advanced by the conflict.

We have every reason to think that the new Governor of Queensland will take away with in a some pleasant recollections of his visit to this colony, brief though it has been. While enjoying the hospitality of so genial a host as Lyrd Canterlury, the Marquis of Normanoy, as well as the Marchioness and the junior members of the lamily, have also been the recipients of a civic entertainment in our magnificent new Town state there is any the junter members of the lamity, have also been the receptents of a civic entertainment in our magnificent new Town hall, and have been shown all the hons of the city, as well as many of the places and objects within easy reach, including the Bailarat gold-held, the town of Geelong, and the quiet shores of Cerio Bay. To the ladies of Melbourne this visit will long be memorable as the occasion of a social reform, in which they are peculiarly interested, and which we may hope to find fully established for future observance. The Mayor of Melbourne had mynted their Excellencies, and the gentlemen of their stites, to pay a visit to the new city fuildings, in order that the Marquis and his friends, while seeing the hall and the civic offices, might partake of a luncheon, to which the Corporation and a few leading citizens were also invited. The Marchiness of Normanby expressed a desire to be of the party, and the Mayor at once took the hint, and he and the Mayores immediately sent invitations to about 150 ladies, the wives of the intended male guests. The result was a gathering of about 3 to ladies and genellengen at a supressored and constitutions to a supressored and general parties. The result was a gathering of about 300 ladies and gentlemen at a sumptious dejeuner, when the inevitable toasting and dejeuner, when the inevitable toasting and speechmaking was gone through, under circumstances which everybody felt to be as delighting as it was novel; and the whole proceedings—speeches and all—were strongly flavoured with the new element; for everybody had something to say about the grace and charm which the ladies by their presence lent to the entectainment. The ladies were rapturously toasted to conclude with; and they left the half in a high state of felicity.

Mr. Fraser, of Batavia, leaves to day for Sydney. felicity.

Mr. Fraser, of Batavia, leaves to day for Sydney. He has not at present succeeded in obtaining the co-operation of South Australia in his proposed scheme of steam communication for mails and passengers from Europe and the East via Batavia. If any arrangement could have been made with that colony, which would of necessity have included the calling of the steamers at Port Darwin, Mr. Fraser would, I presume, have made a definite proposal to our Government; but as he is now thrown for his principal support on New South Wales and Queensland, in conjunction with Netherlands-India, he will consult with the Governments of the eastern colonies as to the details which will best meet their wishes, and in the meantime contents himself with the promise of a favourable consideration of his proposals by this colony, when they assume a definite shape. Mr. Fraser had an interview with the committee of our Chamber of Commerce on Monday last, and went into a lengthened exposition of the capabilities of the Netherlands India Steam Navigation Company to carry out the proposed monthly postal and passenger service with these colonies, or even a fortinghtly service if desired. The latter, he said, could be done for the same subsidy as was now paid to the P. and O. Company for a service once a month. Mr. Fraser has succeeded in convincing Melbourne men that the proposed particular descriptions to the British Answer bility of an intimate connection with so rich and prosperous a settlement as Java, and if the Chamber of Commerce took the project up, as they knew better than he did how far it might be commercially valuable to the colony, he would be prepared to lend the assistance of the Government to a limited extent. He promises to give the whole question his best consideration.

As our binancial year now enumences on the bit July, and as the recent political changes and complications have forced us to the end of the first month without any provision having been made for the meeting of the ordinary demands upon the exchequer, the Assembly voted £133,000 by way of temporary supply for payment of wages and contractors for the month of July, and a Supply Bill was passed through all its stages on Thursday evening in the Assembly, which will no doubt be passed by the Council on Tuesday, so as to validate the payments which will then be due. One of our venerable conscript fathers of the Upper House, the Hon. George Ward Cole, who has on many occasions given proof of the sincerity of his belief in the doctrines of the protectionist school, has been seized with an uncontrollable fear and dread lest his pet principle should be serificed by its advocates in the compromise which he understands to have been arrived at between the free trades and protectionist members of the Cabinet. Captain Cole believes in nothing which he understands to have been arrived at between the free trade and protectionist members of the Cabinet. Captain Cole believes in nothing less than protection all round, and the proposal to try it on a few articles he designates "an insidious design on the part of the free traders to kill protection in detail." He has therefore rushed into print in order that if the dreaded failure of protection should be the result of the contemplated compromise, he may have the satisfaction of knowing that his voice was raised against the evils of "foreign competition." tion."

was raised against the evils of "foreign competition."

The reigning favourite amongst our passenger ships—the Great Britain—has arrived again after one of her successful trips, bringing sixty saloon passengers and 350 others. Amongst the former are Mr. Anthony Trollope, the novelist, and his wite, and our well-known fellow-citizen the Hon. Thomas Howard Fellows, who will at once take his seat in the Assembly as one of the members for St. Kilda. The Great Britain sailed from Liverpool on the 24th May, and her performances have been so uniformly successful that her arrival had been looked for as certain during the two or three days which preceded her being telegraphed from the Heads. On this occasion, adverse winds have rather protracted her voyage, but she has nevertheless accomplished it in sixty-four days, and brought us later Engish papers. While the process of incubation is going on with the new tariff, which the Treasurer is to bring forth on Tuesday, he has been well plied with suggestions from various quarters, and the soft goads merchants have made a slight demonstration with a view to induce him to abandon the all valorem duties and to return to the measurement system. The Chief Secretary and Treasurer both admitted the force of the objections to the former system, and it was stated that with a view to test the effect of the proposed change they were having a measure made of the entire contents of one large bonded store. Of course, there are practical difficulties in the way of carrying out a measurement duty, which had been experienced when it was in operation before, and these were partially discussed. The merchants expressed their readiness to submit to a differential measurement duty, admitting that one rate would not do for all goods. The great difficulty about drawbacks was again discussed, and the Ministers expressed their desire to accede to the wishes of the importers by allowing drawbacks on open stocks if it could be shown to be practicable; but upon all the points in question the Treasurer national water-works, which will be in the hands of the Government in a few days. The report is not likely to be very comforting. After all our enormous outlay on the two great schemes, the one for supplying Geelong, and the other Castlemaine and Sandburst and the Gold-fields adjacent, we are likely to be told that a great part of the money has been thrown away—that some portions of the works will have to be abandoned and others substituted, and that another large loan must be contracted to raise the money for the completion of the undertakings. The works, as they at present exist, appear to be the most giganitic Flunder which we have ever perpetrated.

The prospects of a Customs Union are not improved by the recent change of Ministry, and

The prospects of a Customs Union are not improved by the recent change of Ministry, and the contemplated further changes in the tariff, but nevertheless the Chamber of Commerce seem determined not to allow the question to be lost sight of by every Government that comes into power. With Mr. Duffy's oft expressed views in layour of federation, and with the admissions of other members of Cabinet in favour of Intercolonial free-trade the Chamber are justified in urging the matter specially on the attention of the Ministry, which they have done by letter to the Chief Secretary. The desired interview was declined by the Ministera, as it would have been obviously inconvenient to discuss the subject of tariffs before the Treasurer made his statement in Parliament.

DEATH BY BURNING.—James B. Eggleston, a boy about four years old, was the victim of a terrible accident at Dempsey Island, near Newcastle, on the 22nd, and died on the 25th. The tale is told in the evidence of the mother, who is the wife of a farmer. She says, on Saturday morning, the 22nd July, about half-past 7 o'clock, I left the deceased playing with his brother and eister on the bed, in the bedroom; while I went to the kittlen to get some water to give the children a bath, and from there to the yard to bring in some wood to put on the

These veins, for they can hardly be called reefs, have the same course in all the claitas, being very nearly due north and south, and in all instances, the westerly face of the stone is the richest, the underlay being due east. The vein in Krohman's claim is not quite ax inches wide, the two inches on the western or foot wall being one mass of gold, not merely studding the stone but standing out from it on the edges of the fractures in such a way as to be felt by the hand as well as seen by the eye. As in the case of the claim of Mr. Brown, some twelve inches of the slate has to be taken out along with the quartz, as it is strongly impregnated with gold for that distance, and has also a large number of small veins or leaders running through it in all directions. The stone is taken out in large slabs about six inches thick, and from 8 to 10 inches wide, and from 15 to 18 inches long. I saw I suppose about thirty bags full of this stone som up from below into the tunnel, where it is stowed away out of sight and resch. I never saw anything richer than this lot of stone, and as I handled the whole mans, stone after stone, as it came out of the bag, I was utterly unable to give one of the whole lot the preference over the other. I have no doubt that this stone, if crushed by itself, would give the same return as I have calculated for that of Mr. James Brown, namely 300 ounces to the ton. In fact, even with the slate that is to accompany it, and which of itself forms two-thirds of the whole lot the preference over the other. The result was, that the contents were contineed on the ishoratory flace, which at once caught fire. The alarm was then given at the fire stations. On Sunday least, the fire-bell of the No. 2 Volunteers rang out an alarm. The members proceeded at once to 43, Washington-etreet, closely followed by the Insurance fire-men with a hand-pump, and it was found on their arrival that the interior of a chimney at the place indicated had been burning, but that the fire had been extinguished by the inmates. The occurrance is accounted for by a somewhat remarkable incident. A tame pigeon fell down the chimney of hopes No. 43, displacing the soot while fluttering in its fall, and was killed on the bears of the firegrate beneath. The soot which drepped into the fire flared up and ignited the shimney. On the same day (Sunday), the shimney of a house, 389, Macquariestree South, occupied by Mr. James Maxwell, caught fire. The flames were speedily extinguished by some of the members of the Insurance Brigade.

About half-past il o'clock, yesterday foremoon, an alarm was given at the city fire stations to the effect that a fire had broken out at Mr. W. G. Henthrey's catabilianuosi, Caustiersagh-street North. The engine of the No. 2 Volunteer Fire Company was on the sort shortly after the receipt of the alarm, quickly succeeded by the Insurance Brigade Manual, the No. 1 Volunteer coming in third in order of arrival. On getting into Mr. Henirvy's year it was observed that the shingled roof of a back hitchen was in fames; the fire it was believed having originated frew sparks from the chimney of an adjoining house. FORMATION OF ASPARAGUS BEDS.

Mn. W. H. Treen, F.R. H.S., writes to the Melbourne Weship Times:—

We knew of no vegetable that conduces more to the health and comfort of a family than asparagus. In the first place it is nutritious and easy of digretion; secondly, it is always considered good food for invalids; and thirdly, where can you find a man in jovial health who cannot enjoy a dish of it. In fact, it is one of the finest vegetable productions, and a garden without an asparagus bed is not a garden complete. Therefore we think an asparagus bed is not a garden complete. Therefore we think an asparagus bed is not a garden complete. Therefore we think an asparagus bed is not a garden complete. Therefore we think an asparagus bed is not a garden complete. Therefore we think an asparagus bed should occupy an important position in all well appending auditine of asparagus is that it be planted upon well-drained, dry ground, which has been treuched three spits deep. This should receive three good layers of well-rotted manure. When you have selected your site for the bed, first level the ground, and mark it out for planting. Whatever width you make the bed (we prefer, as a general rule, 4 feet 6 incheely, a little of the soil should be withdrawn into the alleys for spreading over the roots when they are planted. Now with regard to the plants, you cannot do better than proceed to your nursecyman and procure plants from the drill, and be particular that they are forked up with care, so that they are not bruised. Having obtained these, take nice and level, mark out the rows, and proceed with the plants is not soil in their places a little mould should be placed upon them, and the whole levelled by means of a rake. The plants should not be nearer than one foot spart each way. The first season the plants will make rapid strong growth. And when the foliage begins to decay a good dressing of rotten manure should be applied, and over this a nice evering with make rapid strong growth. THE BRAUTIFUL ESTATE OF NARROOGAL, consisting of 670 cores of the FINEST LAND in the DISTRICT OF WELLINGTON; together with the LEASE OF THE NARRAGOOL RUN, adjoining the Freshold.

with the LEASE OF THE NARRAGOOL EUN, adjoining the Freebold.

THIS MAGNIFICENT PROPERTY is situate at the head of the Wellington Valley, with the Bell River running through its centre, and was the first land taken up in the district.

It is bounded on the north and east by the estate of the late Sir W. Verner, and on the south and west by the runs of Messrs. Lord and M'Nevin, and others.

The head station is distant from Orange 47 miles, and from Wellington 12 miles.

As a pastoral property Narrogal is perhaps unrivalled in the Western Districts. THE RICHNESS OF THE FASTURAGEs and the fine sheet of water formed by the basin of the Bell, combine with the beauty of the landscape and the salubrity of the climate to impart a value that can scarcely be estimated.

On the Freshold are a SUBSTANTIALLY-BUILT BRICK HOUSE, a new WOOLSHED, and extensive STABLES, STOCKYARDS, and HORSE PADDOCKS.

After the above will be sold the WHOLE OF THE NABROOGAL WELL-KNOWN SHEEP, about 8000, more or less (including the choice ram flock), the purchaser of which will be allowed the use of the runs and woolshed till after shearing.

The SPLENDID STUD of IM HORSES, all bred in the paddocks, where they can now be inspected.

Mr. E. A. Smith, the Superintendent in charge, will show the property, of which an early inspection is requested.

The attention of the several Governments in the Australian colonies is respectfully solicited to the sale of this ship. The attention also is asked of steamship companies, shipowners, and others, as the vessel is suited in every way for a first-class intercolonial passenger and cargo vessel.

The ship was built on the Clyde to order for the Otago Steamship Company, without regard to cost, and has been kept in the best order since her arrival in the colonies in the year 1964, since when she has only been worked about three years.

kept in the best order since her arrival in the colonies in the year 1804, since when she has only been worked about three years.

The ENGINES are by Scott and Co., are direct acting 18-horse power, 44 inch cylinders, 2 feet 5 inch stroke, supplied by boilers of sufficient surface to give 22½ lbs. steam, at which the Government safety-valve is now weighted. There is a spare propeller, crank-shaft, and other duplicates of her machinery. The engines have been under the charge of her late engineer, Mr. James M'Dougail, during the whole period they have been working.

The BOILERS have been recently examined in Melbourne, and prenounced to be in unquestioned condition, and good for three years' service without repairs: tube plates, furnace crowns, and shell as good as the first day. Her speed is 12 knots fair steaming, with 800 tons coal on board; draught of water, with 800 tons deadweight or haveing capacity for 1000 tons measurement in the aggregate, would be 15 feet 6 inches. CONSUMPTION of FUEL is 20 tons per day at full speed.

Ehe has been fitted with a spar deck at a considerable cost, which improves the ship comprehensively. Her cabins comprise sleeping and saloon accommodation, equal to 40 first and 80 second class passengers (the latter accommodation capable of considerable increase); the former fitted in the newest and most elegant style. Her cofff, anchors, chains, boats, gare, &c., including condensers for supplying 250 gallons per diem, are all of fired quality and in good order. Her hull was recently inspected and found to be thoroughly sound.
